01 / THE PERSON BEHIND THE PLAN

You can see the possibility.

Maya closes the laptop, then opens it again. The proposal is finished. She has checked the numbers three times. There is nothing left to prepare, but she cannot bring herself to press send.

She is thirty-nine. She knows her work is good. People recommend her, thank her, and come back. Yet the moment she puts a price on that work, something changes. She begins imagining the client's reaction. Too expensive. Too ambitious. Who does she think she is?

So she lowers the price. For a moment, she feels relief. By the next morning, the relief has become frustration. Another project that will take too much of her time for too little return. Another promise to do it differently next time.

Jordan is twenty-four and has a different version of the same moment. He has saved tutorials about editing videos, building an AI service, and opening an online store. Each new possibility feels like a fresh start. His first offer is still a draft.

Your version may look different again. Perhaps you want your own place, a business that belongs to you, a beautiful trip, or more room to help the people you love. Somewhere between seeing the possibility and participating in it, a familiar thought takes over.

That moment is a place to begin. There is a person bringing a lifetime of beliefs and feelings to every plan. That person deserves attention, too.

MAYA AND JORDAN ARE FICTIONAL TEACHING CHARACTERS.

02 / GIVE YOUR AMBITION A DIRECTION

A desire that belongs to you.

Before we examine a belief, we need a desire worth examining it for. Let yourself want the visible things. Then stay long enough to understand what they hold for you: freedom, security, adventure, generosity, satisfaction, or a sense that you are participating in your own life.

The prosperity teachings behind IntentField ask you to attend to your inner life: the picture you hold of yourself, what you expect, what you repeatedly tell yourself, and the feeling you bring to receiving. They invite a relationship with abundance through desire, imagination, gratitude and openness. We carry that spiritual approach into ordinary decisions about work and money.

Begin with three lists. Write what would support your stability now. Write the possessions and experiences you desire. Then write the qualities and relationships you want to grow alongside your wealth. Keep all three. You can appreciate your life and want it to expand.

Choose one chief prosperity focus. Give it a sentence you can return to. Imagine an ordinary moment in the life it would make possible, including yourself and the feeling of living it. You may use pictures, words, or a sense of meaning.

Then choose a small action that lets your inner work meet experience. The larger desire can remain expansive while today's step is manageable. Your customer, circumstances and exact route remain open. You are practicing how you participate.

Maya begins by hearing the thought that appears before she sends her price. Jordan begins by choosing one service to explore. Each now has something specific to bring into the six-stage practice: Desire, Discover, Align, Rehearse, Build and Receive. These stages can repeat within a day.

03 / SEE THE PRACTICE IN USE

Jordan's first direction

A fictional worked example. Jordan is 24, works shifts and is exploring video editing. These are intentions and planned actions, not customer results.

What would support my stability now?

Cover my regular bills and build a cash buffer.

What would I love to own or experience?

Take a trip with my sister and eventually choose more of my working hours.

Who do I want to become, and what relationships matter?

Become dependable, confident about asking questions, and more present with family.

My chief prosperity focus

Build a video-editing service that earns through useful, well-delivered work.

What this makes possible for me

I want more choice over my time and the satisfaction of building something of my own.

One ordinary moment in that life

I finish a project on Friday, receive a thank-you from a client and put my phone away for dinner. I feel capable and present.

One action I will take

Create a short sample with footage I have permission to use, then ask one local business owner what would make it useful.

When and what I will review

Next Friday: review the response and what I learned about making the offer.

04 / YOUR WORDS, YOUR DIRECTION

Make room for what you want.

Write freely. Keep all three lists, then choose one direction to return to.

What would support my stability now?

Practical needs, breathing room, or resources...

What would I love to own or experience?

The home, trip, freedom, or experience that matters to me...

Who do I want to become, and what relationships matter?

Qualities, connection, contribution...

My chief prosperity focus

One direction I choose to return to...

04 / YOUR WORDS, YOUR DIRECTION

Give your direction a place in life.

Let your larger desire stay expansive. Make today's next step manageable.

What this makes possible for me

Why this desire is mine...

One ordinary moment in that life

Include myself, a sensory detail and its feeling...

One action I will take

A manageable step and when I will take it...

When and what I will review

A date and the experience I want to learn from...

05 / BEFORE YOU MOVE ON

One direction. One next step.

Use this checklist after the worksheet. Return after taking your action.

- ☐ I have written all three lists without making my desire smaller for someone else.
- ☐ I have chosen one chief focus and explained why it matters.
- ☐ I have spent a moment with the feeling of a life I want to inhabit.
- ☐ I have noticed a belief or hesitation to explore, without turning it into a verdict about myself.
- ☐ I have chosen a small useful action and a time to review it.
- ☐ I will record what happened and something I appreciate.

What happened, and what do I appreciate?

06 / A BEGINNING YOU CAN BUILD ON

The seven-day book journey.

This sample introduces the first practice. The complete seven-day edition is being developed; it is separate from the thirty-day course.

01 Meet the person behind the plan

Notice the self-image you bring to work and money.

02 Want the money and the life

Create your three lists and review your desire.

03 Learn, change and rewrite

Examine one belief and choose a behavior to practice.

04 Find an alignment you can live

Choose an honest supportive state and a meaningful milestone.

05 Rehearse becoming

Imagine the fulfilled life and rehearse today's response.

06 Bring it into business

Create a small experiment and make room for insight.

07 Receive, care and continue

Review experience, appreciate what arrived, and choose next steps.

About these teachings

This original sample develops the V2.1 Wealth Primer. Its three-list vision and declarations draw on the supplied The Lazy Man's Way to Riches (physical PDF pages 26-32 and 39-43). Desire, feeling, gratitude, teachability and repeated application draw on the reviewed Your Wish Is Your Command material. The six-stage method, story, questions and examples are IntentField adaptations. Maya and Jordan are fictional teaching characters. This is a spiritual and educational practice; no particular income is promised.

The six-stage cycle returns throughout the work: Desire, Discover, Align, Rehearse, Build and Receive. The book is a complete beginning; the optional course offers a daily structure for continued practice.
